KAOHSIUNG — 1 July 2022

Dear brethren:

In recent letters, I have occasionally cautioned against the deceitfulness of Satan to displace the physical assembling of ourselves with meeting online as if one was as good as the other in all respects. Although past advances in electronic communication, e.g., radio and TV, have also enticed substitution, they never had the lure and widespread appeal of an e-meeting. There are multiple reasons for this, however, at this time, I would like to emphasize a positive aspect of the e-meeting and how it is enabling us in our work here, even presently, to accomplish good for the kingdom.

We are presently teaching an online Bible class on the book of Revelation. If it were not for the ability to conduct the study online, it most likely would have never begun. It came about by the request of one of our sisters in the congregation and, with others also expressing interest in John's Apocalypse, it immediately turned into a group study encompassing even two regulars who are members of sister congregations. All who meet online for this class have in common great distance from the physical place of our church assembly. Even those who belong to the congregation here in Kaohsiung would find physically assembling for the class to be most inconvenient at best, or just much too difficult for them during midweek.

One of our local church members finds it difficult to drive after dark because of an eye problem. Another leaves her office so late that she would be attending either without having had her evening meal or having to eat takeout during class, followed by a long and late drive home. Another has a two-hour return trip home exacerbated by health issues. One hard working brother works late, rises early, and he too would have a sleep-robbing long trip home after class ended. Nonetheless, on Sunday, they each willingly make the trek for the joy of the face-to-face fellowship and worship intended by our Lord. Then there are those who are members in sister congregations, but who also attend our midweek class online.

Many years ago we baptized a young lady who was raised here in Kaohsiung. She is now married and living in Singapore with her husband. Both are very active in our Lord's church and are a great strength to the brethren there. This sister also regularly enjoys our midweek class from distant Singapore. Her husband would also attend if his office hours were not in conflict with the class time.

It is not uncommon to hear a brother leading a prayer from the other side of the island thanking God for the modern technology that makes it possible to assemble for study though separated by great distances. We all need to thank God for these tools of technology. The best way to express our appreciation to God is by using these devices to share His word, and to attend online studies. We need to take advantage of the opportunities that free unlimited calling online presents to us. Let us not take a myopic view that causes us to dismiss opportunities beyond state lines or national borders. Today, calling overseas can be just as toll-free as calling across the street.

If you would like to join our Thursday night class on the book of Revelation, we would be pleased to see you online. This class happens to be in English, thus there is no language barrier. Bear in mind that a Thursday evening class is a Thursday morning class for those of you who reside in the States. For you early risers, it is a great way to start the day. If interested, e-mail me at <e.fb.confidential@gmail.com> with your phone number and I will call you with instructions and help you with setting up.

Your servant in Christ,

Eugene F. Brzozowski

We are grateful for your continued support. Please note this newsletter is for July 2022. Therefore, the numbers here are for June 2022.

We are still looking for a congregation to take over the responsibility of overseeing and managing the China Missions work.

Although we can no longer continue in this capacity, we are committed to our financial support in Taiwan. As I wrote last month, we have known Gene and supported his work for the past 30+ years.

Our deadline has been adjusted since we have not had a response to our call for help. We ask you to prayerfully consider this opportunity. Contact Gene or me if you are interested. We will fill you in on the scope of the work involved.

God bless. —Chris
