BOUNDARIES

“Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful” (Psalm 1:1).

In all the years I’ve worked with people, I’ve yet to meet someone whose life was all messed up because he or she kept God’s commands.

Yet, in a day when personal freedom is celebrated as an inalienable right, talk of conforming our lifestyle to God’s ways is often viewed as an infringement.

And anyone who speaks out in favor of God’s boundaries is ruled out of bounds.

But, in this frenzy to be free, it should not go unnoticed that our society is increasingly marked with a haunting sense of meaninglessness and despair.

God’s people should have a distinctly different view of boundaries. Like the psalmist, we must realize that a blessed life comes from delighting in the law of the Lord (Psalm 1:2) not in living like those who “walk in step with the wicked or stand in the way that sinners take” (v.1).

A believer in Jesus will recognize that God’s boundaries are not meant to take the pizzazz out of life.

Instead, they are divine fences constructed with God’s wisdom to help us avoid the treachery and trouble of reckless living.

Next time you are tempted to break through God’s boundaries, remember His loving purpose in putting up fences. Choose to bless God for the boundaries and for the way they bless you.
