INSIGNIFICANT

Movers, and shakers are people climbing the ladder of influence, and success. Luke 3 mentions seven prominent leaders who exercised control in the society of their time.

Roman Emperor Tiberius Caesar held the power of life, and death over people in the far-flung empire. Pontius Pilate represented Rome as governor of Judea; while Herod, Philip, and Lysanias kept people in line at the regional level.

Annas, and Caiaphas served as high priests, taking their religious authority seriously. While these power brokers flexed their political muscles, “the Word of God came to John the son of Zacharias in the wilderness” (v.2). Who could seem less important than this obscure man living in the desert and listening for God’s voice?

What could John the Baptist possibly accomplish by “preaching a baptism of repentance for the remission of sins”? (v.3). Yet multitudes came to John seeking truth, turning from their wrongs, and wondering if he could be the Messiah (vv.7,15).

John’s life helps us understand what it means to be significant in God’s eyes. Like John, may everything we say and do point others to Jesus.
